New Shoe Saved British.

Chiropodists in uniform as a necessary and honored part of the British army is proposed by a London paper inspired by the marching record of a Lancashire regiment, which boasts of a well-known chiropodist among its ranks. This regiment has made the hardest practice marches without a man dropping out. The reason is the fine shape the regimental feet are in. Detached from the humdrum routine of duty, the soldier-chiropodist spends his day peeling and paring. If every regiment had the same advantages such things as retreats from Moors might be made without discomfort.

Besides the thing which saved the British on that occasion was the bad state of the German feet, due to new boots.

The National Society of Chiropodists, which has a clinic in London for the free treatment of soldiers and sailors, is enthusiastic over the idea of a chiropodist corps, wearing khaki and bearing the corn and rancor of some other appropriate insignia on their caps.

Lived Long Under Water.

A resuscitating machine, such as is used by the United States government in mine rescue work, recently kept a young woman alive under water for one hour and ten minutes.

This remarkable feat was performed during the session of the safety and sanitation exposition in New York. Conducted under the direction of a former surgeon of the United States revenue service, the test was performed for the purpose of illustrating the efficacy of mechanical respiration.

The breathing mask, which has a double rubber tube extending to a hand-operated lung apparatus, was strapped over the girl's nose and mouth, and she was then placed in a large glass-front tank.

Through submerged for one hour and ten minutes, she did no breathing of her own accord.

Worth Cultivating.

Anchangel, City of Ice.

Anchangel, the oldest port of the Russian empire, will awaken in a few weeks more to vital war importance according to a statement of the National Geographic society.

When the ice clears from the White sea Russia will be able to communicate with her allies through a free western port and to receive much needed war supplies and other manufactures over a route thousands of miles shorter than that via Vladivostok. Anchangel is situated at the head of the Irena delta, as far north as the northernmost shores of Hudson Bay. It is the largest and most important city that is near the arctic circle.

The harbor of Anchangel is optimistically said to be open from May to October.

However, it is entirely free from ice during the months of July and August, although in the average year it is free for navigating purposes for a period some weeks longer.

The city lies on the Drina river, 26 miles from the White sea. It is 749 miles northwest of St. Petersburg, and is connected with the distributing cen ters of the interior by railway and canal.

Have to Import Hard Wood.

Notwithstanding the great amount of timber on the Pacific coast, there is a very meager supply of hard wood, and much of the oak made use of in the western part of this country is imported from the eastern countries of Asia.
